PREACHER TO SPEAK ON THE FRANK CASE

In a sermon at the Baptist tabernacle Sunday evening Rev. John E. Barnard, of Asheville, N. C., will discuss the subject of capital punishment, and will touch on the Frank case. At both services last Sunday Mr. Barnard was heard by large audiences, and it is expected that his sermon Sunday night will fill the tabernacle.

GOVERNOR SLATON WRITES HERE FROM CONFERENCE

Friends of Governor and Mrs. John M. Slaton are in receipt of telegrams from them dated Friday at “Pike’s Peak Summit, Colorado,” telling of their successful journey to the top of the snow-covered mountain.

Governor and Mrs. Slaton left Atlanta last Saturday for Colorado Springs, Colo., to attend the governors’ conference, where Georgia’s chief executive made an address. They will return home some time next week.

FRANK WITNESS IS SOUGHT BY POLICE

George Epps, Newsboy, Accused of Swindling Man Out of $1.50

Little George Epps, witness in the Frank trial, believed to be the last person who talked to Mary Phagan before she entered the National Pencil factory on the day she was murdered, April 28, is sought by the police. A. Montgomery complained to the detective department Friday night that he had been swindled out of $1.50 by the lad.

Epps is a news boy. He lives at Chestnut and Kennedy streets, near the home of the Colemans, parents of little Mary Phagan. When on the witness stand, he made a good impression by his clear and quick answers to questions put by lawyers for both sides in the big legal battle.
